

RACKET

OF AMERICAN CROWDS WEARS THE PRINCE OUT.

THIS ANOTHER BUSY DAY FOR KAISER'S BROTHER.

THEY PUT HIM OFF AT BUFFALO.

Toledo Germans Disappointed—Stop at Cleveland and Erie—A Big Time at Minneapolis.

On Board Prince Henry's Train, en Route to Buffalo.—Prince Henry is beginning to chafe with annoyance. The perpetual racket made by American crowds is wearing him out. At first he was rather amused at the eternal brass band, and the continuous shout. It was all a novelty, and as novelties are what he is hunting for over here, he smiled and took notes. Now the novelty has worn off; he does not smile so much and his note book is not used so often.

"Over in Germany," he said to Admiral Evans, "the crowds do not shout when members of the royal family appear. They gather about the stations and raise their hats respectfully, but do not make any noise. They would not consider that they were showing proper respect if they did."

Today promises to be one of the busiest on the Prince's calendar. Buffalo, Niagara Falls, Syracuse and Rochester are on the itinerary for stops and at all four places the bands will render "Der Wacht am Rhein," and the crowd will cheer.

NEWARK VISIT RECALLED.

Toledo, O., March 5.—This morning nearly 5000 people gathered at the union station. All the German societies were represented, two bands played Gorman and American airs and Editor Hubert had an elaborate address to present. The train arrived at 6:13 and left at 6:18 and during the five minutes stop the Prince slept. Toledo Germans are disappointed.

STOP AT CLEVELAND.

Cleveland, O., March 5.—There was a big crowd at the union depot when Prince Henry's special train rolled in at 9:15 a. m. today. There were no formal ceremonies. The members of the Prince's suite were at breakfast. The Prince appeared on the back platform of his car and bowed his acknowledgments to the plaudits of the multitude. A change of engines was made and after a five minute stop the train was off on its way to Buffalo.

STOP AT ERIE.

Erie, Pa., March 5.—Prince Henry's train made a 10 minute stop here and an immense crowd greeted him. Miss Clara Conrad representing the Citizens' Reception committee presented the Prince with a bouquet of American beauties. Mrs. Charles V. Gridley, the widow of the hero of Manila, and her daughter, Ruth, were presented to the Prince.

PRINCE AT MILWAUKEE.

Milwaukee, March 5.—Milwaukee was host to Prince Henry for six hours last evening. A crowd of fully 200,000 was on the street to greet him. Then there was a public reception and banquet and the Prince left for the east at 10 o'clock. At the banquet the Prince made a splendid speech complimenting Milwaukee and offering a gallant toast to the women of that city.

EMPEROR PLEASED.

Berlin, March 5.—Emperor William, instead of being displeased with the telegram of Miss Alice Roosevelt concerning the launching of the Meteor as some of the English newspapers aver, because of its familiar tone, was, on the contrary, very much pleased with it.

A member of the Cabinet relates that after an audience with Emperor William on February 23, official business having been finished, he was about to withdraw when the Kaiser remarked:

"I must show you the charming telegram I have just received from Miss Alice Roosevelt."

To other members of his entourage the Emperor has also expressed his pleasure over this telegram, and has praised its natural and uncontrived character.

SNOW

WIDELY DISTRIBUTED OVER THE COUNTRY

NEWARK NOT THE ONLY PLACE THAT SUFFERS.

THE STORM A RECORD BREAKER.

New York, West Virginia, Maryland, Kentucky, Pennsylvania and Ohio "In" on the Snow Affair.

New York, March 5.—A fierce snow and wind storm, of blizzard dimensions broke over the city at 3:30 this morning and eight hours later was still raging with no signs of abatement.

Street car traffic is impeded and threatened with blockade; passage to Jersey City is difficult because of the blinding snow and ferry boats are feeling their way across the river.

The wind blew with a velocity of 35 miles an hour this morning with no signs of diminishing.

The storm is the tail-end of a Texas norther, which started Monday and passed over Georgia last night, developing into a gale. Advancing up the coast it distributed rain, snow and sleet over a wide area.

Danville, Ky., March 5.—The heaviest fall of snow known in Central Kentucky in many years fell here last night.

Maysville, Ky., March 5.—The worst snowstorm within the memory of the oldest citizen, struck here yesterday, continued all night and is raging today. The snow is now 10 inches deep.

Parkersburg, W. Va., March 5.—The snow fall is very heavy all over the state.

Ashland, Ky., March 5.—Snow began falling here yesterday morning at 10 o'clock and has continued ever since. The snow is now 18 inches deep and it is still snowing. The river is rising slowly. River men predict a big flood.

Clarksburg, W. Va., March 5.—The heaviest snow of the season fell here during the last 20 hours and was accompanied by a high wind drifting the snow to a depth of several feet in places. It is over 12 inches deep on the level and still snowing. All railroads are blocked and live stock is suffering greatly.

Cumberland, Md., March 5.—The severest snow storm in the history of this section is prevailing here. All railroads are tied up. B. & O. train number 2 is reported completely snow-bound near Oakland.

Wheeling, W. Va., March 5.—A heavy snow storm has been falling since midnight and this morning there is more than a foot on the ground. This coming on the top of the recent flood makes it especially severe on hundreds of people who are packed away in inconvenient places without fuel. The traction companies have all suspended operations and railroads are seriously hampered.

Pittsburg, March 5.—The heavy snow which began last night and continues with unabated fury has effectively brought active business within the city limits to an abrupt termination. But few of the electric lines in the city are now in operation. The suburban lines are altogether out of business and the steam railroads are only in operation with badly deranged schedules. No such fall of snow has been experienced here this winter and appearances indicate a record breaker.

Aberdeen, O., March 5.—It has been snowing constantly here since yesterday morning with no signs of a let up. It is the deepest snow that ever fell in this section. The ground is covered from a depth of 12 to 30 inches. Aberdeen people are without fuel and there will be great suffering if the snow continues much longer. There is not a lump of coal in the town. In some places near here the snow is five and six feet deep. Farmers are burning fences and pig pens to keep warm.

Washington, March 5.—The weather bureau today publishes the following:

"The flood situation in the Ohio remains practically unchanged with a crest now in the neighborhood of Cincinnati. The rain and snow of the past

CHARGES OF DYNAMITE USED TO WRECK BANK.

CRACKSMEN ARE WELL PAID FOR TROUBLE THIS MORNING.

ESCAPED ON A B. & O. HAND CAR

Montgomery, Ind., Bank Loses $4300
Ex-Village Marshal Saw Burglars at Work, but Was Covered.

Washington, Ind., March 5.—The National bank of Montgomery, seven miles east of here, was burglarized early this morning. The safe was blown open and the cracksmen got $4000 in money and $300 worth of postage stamps. Five charges of nitroglycerine or dynamite were used by the men who after getting the money escaped on a B. & O. hand car going south. William Klesmier who runs a restaurant and Charles Encoff, former marshal of the village of Montgomery, say the cracksmen at work, but were afraid to leave the restaurant and give the alarm, because a pal of the burglars stood near them with two revolvers and warned the men to remain quiet.

ROBBERS AT WESTERVILLE.

Columbus, O., March 5.—The post-office at Westerville, Ohio, was blown by burglars at 2:30 this morning and all the money and stamps were taken. Postmaster Chapman has secured of L. Grandstaff of Arlington and his two bloodhounds to run them down.

The Canal Bill.

Columbus, O., March 5.—The Senate has concurred in the House amendment to the Hosea resolution, fixing Tuesday, March 11, as the date of the joint meeting for the consideration of the canal abandonment bill. Messrs. Harrison and Decker objected to changing the date of the meeting, which was originally scheduled for Tuesday, March 18, upon the ground that some of the interests affected by the abandonment or retention of the canals might find it impossible to be represented on the earlier date. The outlook is for a two days' session. President Nippert appointed Messrs. Hosea, Harding, Archer, Crites and Royer members of the joint committee to make arrangements for the meeting.

The Garfield Law.

Columbus, O., March 5.—The House on record Tuesday against the Garfield corrupt practices act and passed the bill for its repeal by a vote of 59 to 24.

BATTLE

Fought Between a Large Force of Indians and a Troop of Mexican Rangers.

Phoenix, Ariz., March 5.—News has reached here of a fierce battle between a large force of Yaquis and a troop of Mexican rangers, under command of Colonel Navarro, near Petaco, a small town 199 miles east of Quayamas. The rangers were ambushed, but managed to reach a stone corral and from that barricade poured a deadly fire into the Indian forces. After two hours' shooting the Yaquis retired leaving six dead. Three Mexicans were severely wounded. It is believed this band makes up the remnant of the Yaquis warring forces.

DISASTER WAS DUE TO OVERCONFIDENCE.

Washington, March 5.—In his testimony before the senate committee on the Philippines General Hughes related the particulars of the massacre at Balangiga, Samar, September 1. He took upon himself the responsibility for the sending of troops to that post and for the selection of the officer who was placed in command.

"I had known him for years," he said. He was a fine officer and I had every confidence in him."

General Hughes said, however, that

WIRELESS

Messages Through Land and Sea—Said Wireless Telephony May be Heard Great Distance.

Paris, March 5.—E. Ducrotet, the French electrical engineer, has made the following statement concerning the wireless telephony which he has invented:

"The Academy of Science, to which my invention of telephoning without wires has been submitted, acknowledges its value. The transmitter and receiver are much like those in daily use for ordinary telephones. There is this difference, that a small coil is introduced and the electrical intensity is slightly increased.

"When the instruments are put down deep in the earth messages can be transmitted over enormous distances. Forests, rivers, mountains, may separate armies, yet they can communicate with each other through the earth by wireless telephony.

"Wireless telephone messages can be transmitted through the sea from shore to shore, or between ships. The voice is transmitted without the least difficulty and the most delicate articulation reaches the ear.

Berlin, March 5.—The United States navy department has ordered for two stations a complete outfit of the wireless telegraph system of Slaby and Arce from the Allgemeine Electricische Gesellschaft of Berlin for the purpose of experimenting against the Marconi system.

London, March 5.—Speaking in the house of Lords of the government attitude toward wireless telegraphy, the Marquis of Londonderry, the postmaster general, said that while he personally regarded the wireless system as the greatest invention of the age, he could not grant Marconi license to establish signal stations in the United Kingdom for fear of interrupting the extensive experimental work now being carried on by the admiralty from which the government hoped to attain more complete results.

HEALTH CODE BILL

Columbus, O., March 5.—By a practically unanimous vote the House last evening passed the State Board of Health Code Bill, introduced by Mr. Comings, of Lorain. It gives to the State Board of Health wide supervisory powers. No sewage system may be constructed without its approval. At present it controls the placing of outlets of sewers. In the matter of contagious diseases stringent provision is made for the notification of Boards of Health, and even physicians cannot escape responsibility. Quarantining of measles, chicken pox and the whooping cough is made optional. Disinfection is provided for by giving extreme latitude. One new section provides that a room, occupied by a consumptive, may be disinfected and the quarantined and infected persons may be detained. Municipalities are given power to erect contagious hospitals and to seize houses for that purpose or for quarantining. Boards of Health are given power to regulate the sale of milk, and dairymen may be required to furnish a certificate that their cows are free from disease.

The strongest feature of the code is the restricting to the state of the control of epidemics and the handling of contagion of all kinds. The bill really defies tuberculosis as a contagious disease.

Dropped Dead.

Washington, March 5.—Speaker Henderson has received a telegram stating that Congressman Rufus W. Polk, of Pennsylvania, dropped dead in the Hotel Walton at Philadelphia this morning.

His women always indicate by the head dress whether they are married or single.

MRS. STONE BECAME WHEN THE LAWYER

PUT SOME POINTED QUESTIONS TO HER IN THOMAS CASE.

ADA BLANDY THOMAS AFFAIR

Depositions in the Divorce Suit Now Being Taken at Columbus—Points in Testimony.

Columbus, O., March 5.—The names of several prominent Columbus men have been mentioned in the depositions for the sensational divorce case in which Harold Thomas, son of General Sam Thomas, is plaintiff, and Ada Blandy Thomas, formerly of Newark, is defendant.

The standing of the alleged Thomas child was made secure by the testimony of Dr. Hutton, who testified that he attended Mrs. Thomas when her child was born, in August of 1899. He saw the child again the following December and January and again three months ago. The witness felt positive in his mind that the child which has been mentioned several times since the suit was instituted is the same child that was born in 1899. The statement has been printed that the charge of substitution had been made by Mr. Thomas' side when the little one was mentioned.

Mrs. Keyes, a former neighbor, testified that she had known Mrs. Thomas for six years and had a chance to see the child and mother very frequently. Sometimes every day or so. Mrs. Keyes also feels positive that the child in question is the child of Harold Thomas.

Dr. Early who has attended Mrs. Thomas during the past year or two, was on the stand during the afternoon. He was brought in the case to tell of the physical condition of Mrs. Thomas since he has known her and to identify the child. All of the witnesses are being examined on behalf of Mrs. Thomas.

Most of these summoned are neighbors of the defendant and it was sought to prove by them that the charges of drunkenness, infidelity and desertion are without foundation.

Mrs. Anna Stone of 96 Champion avenue, being examined in chief, testified that in the matter of sobriety and chastity she knew the charges to be false. She was subjected to a most severe cross examination by the counsel for Mr. Thomas, during which she testified that she was the former wife of the present president of the Columbus Humane Society.

"Are you in the habit of going to saloons?" was asked Mrs. Stone.

"How dare you ask me that?" indignantly responded the witness.

Being pressed she stated that she like a glass of beer once in awhile.

"Are you in the habit of associating with men and women who visit saloons?" continued the cross examiner.

"I should say not," responded Mrs. Stone.

"Have you ever heard anybody prior to the beginning of this suit talking about whether Mrs. Thomas got drunk or whether she visited certain resorts of questionable character?"

"No. Those are lies."

"Are you acquainted with Charley Humman of this city?"

"No, sir."

In answer to further questions Mrs. Stone said she did not know that Mrs. Thomas had been riding with Mr. Humman, nor had she heard that, in August, Mrs. Thomas and other parties had gone to a woods to enjoy a keg of beer, nor that on the return trip the vehicle had broken down, necessitating the party to stop at Pinhook to await the arrival of another conveyance.

"Do you know Mr. Potter?" was asked the witness.

"No, sir."

"Did you ever know of Mrs. Thomas driving to any house with a man in a hack driven by Herbert or Herb Bean?"

"No."

In response to further questioning the witness said she did not know that Mrs. Thomas had taken her child with her to meet men in various places, nor Governor Taft made a remarkable statement on Philippine affairs in his testimony before the Senate committee, which deserves more attention than it has received. What he said was that it would have been better for this country if it had never taken or occupied the Philippines. A majority of Americans who have given thought and study to the subject believe with him; but it is something remarkable from Governor Taft, after two years' service on the island, with the best opportunities of forming a judgment from every view of the situation.

THE REAL PURPOSE

Of the Appointment of the Non-Partisan Water Works Committee by the City Council.

When there was such a pronounced condemnation among leading Republican business men all over the city against the dragging of politics into the water works question, it is not to be wondered at that the American-Tribune showed some indications yesterday of a change for the better in that regard.

It is to be noted, however, that the A.-T. comes out in one of its articles more boldly than ever before as a champion of the old water works plant, and manifests opposition to municipal ownership of a new water works system under any circumstances. But this article bears the earmarks of one of the paper's side editors.

We gladly quote what the American-Tribune has to say in one of its articles giving an account of the action of the Council in approving the non-partisan committee to prepare a statement of the water works issue for the voters of the city. for it is the most creditable thing the A.-T. has said on the subject from the very beginning. In that article that paper says:

"The city council at its meeting last evening very obediently carried out the dictates of the Advocate and passed a resolution appointing a committee of four of Newark's representative men to investigate the proposition which has been placed before the people by the city council for the owning and operating of city water works. The resolution does not specify what the committee is to investigate save possibly as to its legality and to the facts of it being presented in a proper manner. What the committee ought to do if the persons appointed accept is to consider in its several parts all the facts regarding the construction, cost of maintaining, number of consumers at present, the least amount to be charged for water, the advantages of meter system over flat rate, or vice versa in fact everything which will give the people and taxpayers a full and complete answer to all questions which arise, even to the advisability of the city owning the plant."

Now that is just what the committee has been appointed for by the council. That the voters of the city shall be given "all the facts" pertaining to every phase of the question is the sole object of the council in appointing the committee. That is why the resolution was passed with such pronounced unanimity, receiving the affirmative vote of every Republican, as well as every Democratic Councilman present at the meeting. The American-Tribune should give some little credit to the Republican Councilmen for doing right, instead of covertly reflecting upon them as it does by inference in another article that is badly out of harmony with the above. In this connection it is not amiss to republish the names of the Councilmen present who VOTED FOR THE RESOLUTION for the water works committee:

Moser, First ward, Democrat.
Fromholtz, Second ward, Democrat.
Shaw, Second ward, Democrat.
Dearduff, Third ward, Republican.
Spees, Third ward, Democrat.
Lamb, Fourth ward, Democrat.
Miller, Fourth ward, Democrat.
Rossel, Fifth ward, Democrat.
Mathecks, Sixth ward, Republican.
Phillips, Sixth ward, Democrat.
Brand, Seventh ward, Democrat.
Smith, Seventh ward, Democrat.
Llan, Eighth ward, Republican.

The three Republican members, be it remembered, have been as uniform in voting for the water works proposition at every stage of the proceedings as the Democrats have. The Advocate reiterates that it gives equal credit to them all.

RAILROAD NEWS

Big Damages Asked.

Georgia B. Johnson, through her attorney, F. V. Owen, filed a suit in common pleas court Tuesday against the B. & O. and C. C. and St. L. railways for $10,000 damages, for personal injury. She alleges that on September 11 1901, she became a passenger on the lines of the defendant companies from Cleveland to Newark and that she was compelled to change trains at Sheilly Junction. There, through the negligence of the companies, a defective platform was maintained, and she fell into a hole, injuring her ankle, hip and back, so that she is permanently lame.—Mt. Vernon Banner.

Local Notes.

Pushing Insurance Business to the Limit—Dying Man Received Consolation in Allopathic Doses—Young Advocate Muddled His First Case. A Client's Queer Compliment to His Lawyer—Judge's Theory of Domestic Relations—A Close Shave.

[Copyright, 1902, by Champ Clark.]
King Solomon declared that there is nothing new under the sun, but I have run across a few things in my life which appear to run counter to that bit of wisdom. Anything novel is, ex necessitate, interesting. First and last, insurance agents have tried about every experiment that human ingenuity could invent to secure business, but I am inclined to the opinion that here is an entirely new wrinkle in the insurance business.

Offer to Insure a Dying Man.

Mon. William O. Gray, probate judge of Pike county, has a mind set on a hair trigger; likewise his tongue. It goes off with every little pressure, and sometimes his words are too much for his hearers beyond measure. He is a scholarly man, an upright judge, an enthusiastic partisan and an unconscious humorist. He is an intense Methodist, and his personal resemblance to Bishop Marvin is remarkable. Whatever he lacks in tact he fully makes up in candor. Among other plans for making money he has operated somewhat as a life insurance agent, which may account for the following anecdote:

While living in Louisiana he had for neighbor and fellow pewholder an old gentleman named Samuel Kem, uncle to ex-Congressman Kem of Nebraska. Old Brother Kem had led a very religious and godly life. A few years ago he became very sick, and just before he died Judge Gray called to see him to cheer him up, and as the sequel will show, he administered consolation to him in allopathic doses.

"Brother Gray," said Brother Kem in a feeble voice, "I have been reviewing my life, and while I have done the best I could I am fearful that I have been a great sinner. Do you suppose I have any chance to go to heaven?"

Gray replied in his offhand style, "I'll insure you for a quarter—insure you for a quarter, sir!" And Brother Kem turned his face to the wall and crossed the dark river with Judge Gray's words of cheerful assurance ringing in his ears.

Judge Krum's First Case.

Of all the lawyers practicing at the St. Louis bar Judge Chester H. Krum is one of the most scholarly and most brilliant. He gives the following racy account of his first lawsuit:

"Admitted to the bar in 1864, I began practice in 1865 after having been graduated from the Harvard Law school. My first case arose upon a shipment of eggs in August from Chicago to St. Louis. The amount involved was $37. The consignor claimed that the eggs had been shipped in good order after having been duly candled. The consignee claimed that all the embryonic fowl contained in the shells, needed in order to make them grow like chandeliers were spurs and feathers. My client was the consignor. The consignee suggested arbitration. Knowing less of the intricacies of hen fruit than of contingent remainders, I advised my client to acquiesce. Alas for the rarity of Christian charity for the Chicagoans on the part of St. Louisians, the arbitrators found that the eggs were adulterated, although the shipper was doubtless an egg-seller man. Illne illic lacrimae. I sent in a bill for $15. It was paid, but the castles in air which I had built in imaginative following in the footsteps of Mansfield, Marshall, Webster and Erskine were rudely shaken to their depths when my client testified to his high appreciation of my distinguished services by writing me:

"Young man, I send you your $15 and anxiously await the opportunity to take them out of your hide."

Difficulties in Getting Divorces.

There is no other class of cases in which the nisi prius judge has such wide discretion as divorce cases. There is no other in which his ideas of life has such controlling influence. There is none in which an appeal is of such little value. The draconic clause of our statute which authorizes a divorce on condition of "acts calculated to render one's condition intolerable" has as many constructions as there are trial judges. The decision depends entirely on the particular judge's theory of the domestic relations.

Getting a divorce in the Pike judicial circuit used to be as easy as falling off a log, and a slippery log at that, but with Judge Reuben F. Roy's advent upon the woolpack the prospect was changed for these weary of the matrimonial yoke.

Judge Roy is a model husband, father and Christian gentleman; has a well defined opinion that when two people stand up and solemnly promise before high heaven "to take each other for better or for worse till death do us two part" they should be compelled to stick to their bargain. Moreover, he took his first lessons in the law out of Judge Theodore Brace's book, and that eminent jurist and splendid gentleman is nearly as much opposed to divorces as is an orthodox Catholic.

No matter how Judge Roy came by his theories, it is a hazardous venture to apply for a divorce in his court. Ordinarily he is the most serene of men, but his anger rises perceptibly when he reaches the divorce docket.

Then the lawyers must walk as skillfully as though treading on eggs or hot plowshares. The slightest bubble, and they, with their clients, are flung into midair.

A Lawyer's Mistake.

Not long since Judge Dempsey and myself instituted a divorce suit for a female client. Captain Morrow and Governor Ball represented the defendant. Really the only thing in controversy was the amount of the alimony, for I never saw a pair who hated each other more intensely. They were fairly aching for a separation. Finally, after many conferences and a great deal of worry, Morrow and I agreed on the alimony. As there was a long case on trial ahead of us and as between us we had a whole township subpoenaed as witnesses, as a consequence of which our case was costing somebody about $100 a day while waiting our turn, I suggested to Morrow to ask the judge to suspend the case on trial a moment to secure his consent to try our case after supper and to announce that our witnesses as to the question of alimony might claim their attendance as witnesses, as a consequence of which our case was costing somebody about $100 a day while waiting our turn, I suggested to Morrow to ask the judge to suspend the case on trial a moment to secure his consent to try our case after supper and to announce that our witnesses as to the question of alimony might claim their attendance as witnesses, as a did she know of Mrs. Thomas having relations with a former resident of Zanesville, who, since, has become a convict in the penitentiary.

During the cross examination other persons were named to Mrs. Stone, and she was asked whether or not she knew them and whether she knew of any relations which Mrs. Thomas may have had with them, to all of which questions the witness replied emphatically in the negative. She also stated that she does not know a saloon keeper of the name of W. J. Murphy, nor that Mrs. Thomas ever met him or any body else at Pinhook. Mrs. Stone was excused after saying that she did not know the location of Mag Donovan's place.

The other witnesses were put through the same list of questions. The lawyers will take depositions in New York and Kansas City. It was in the latter named place that Thomas met his wife.

Frank Lynch the attorney for Thomas, made the following statement regarding W. J. Murphy, whose name came out in the testimony:

"It has come to my knowledge that the name of W. J. Murphy has been used in the case as having been connected with Mrs. Thomas. I desire in justice to say that there is no intimation coming from the side of the plaintiff that Mr. Murphy ever held any relations with Mrs. Thomas that would in any manner compromise him, and we have no information that would indicate that Mr. Murphy has in any manner been a party to any of the charges against Mrs. Thomas."

Her Nerve Fails.

Pittsburg, Pa., March 5.—Mrs. Kate Soffel is in bad shape physically. Her physician was with her almost the entire day. The severe cold she contracted on the day of her removal to this city has affected her lungs. From present indications she will not be able to stand trial next week. She had a slight hemorrhage today. Her nerve is failing and she dreads the court summons.

BURIAL OF JONATHAN CRITES ON WEDNESDAY.

First Car from Hebron to Buckeye L. S. Blizard Felt in Hebron.

Personal Items.

Hebron, O., March 5.—Jonathan Crites, formerly of Hebron, but who has been living for the last few years with his son, the Rev. G. F. Crites at Loudonville, O., died Saturday, March 1st, after an illness of several weeks with pneumonia, aged 73 years. The remains were brought to Hebron Monday evening for interment, and the funeral services were held at Disciple church Tuesday, conducted by Rev. T. N. Madden.

The first car over the Buckeye Lake route, was run Sunday morning, going as far as E. R. Stimmel's Hotel, at the Lake.

The condition of Mrs. Frank Chism, who has been suffering with lung trouble, is considerably improved.

Mrs. T. N. Madden is now convalescing, after a very severe attack of pleurisy.

Miss Rosa Comisford is very sick at her home in the west end. Quite a severe blizzard struck our village Tuesday night. The snow is drifted several feet deep on our streets, which does not look much like spring. The early gardener has hung up his hoe, and will enjoy a cozy place near the fire until the Ground Hog makes its appearance again. The severe windstorm of last week broke the glass in several of the windows of the M. E. church.

Miss Cordelia Sharer was very unfortunate in losing a morocco case containing a very nice pair of eyeglasses. Anyone finding the same will confer quite a favor by returning to the owner.

The meetings are still in progress at the M. E. church.

The Board of Health met Tuesday evening and transacted their usual routine of business. W. D. Andrews was appointed clerk, and Dr. G. N. Brown health officer.

The Ladies Glee Club of Newark, will give an entertainment here at M. E. church, Friday evening, March 21, proceeds for the benefit of the M. E. church.

Miss Adda House, Myrta Davis, and Fanna Gilbert, attended the Teachers' meeting at Alexandria Saturday.

Painters Strike.

Pittsburg, Pa., March 5.—Fifteen hundred painters in Pittsburg went out on a strike this morning. The master painters turned down their application for an advance of ten cents an hour in wages and the strike followed. The workers have been receiving 35 cents an hour. They demand 45 cents. It is possible that other trades may be involved before the end of the week. Work has stopped on the Union Depot, the Frick building and on other large contracts.

ANTHONY PITZER

UNCLE OF AUDITOR A. R. PITZER, DIED TUESDAY

South of Newark, Aged 87 Years—Louis Priest Ninety Years of Age Passes Away.

Mr. Anthony Pitzer, Sr., one of the best known and most highly respected residents of Licking county, died at his home in Licking township, four miles south of Newark, on Tuesday evening, March 4, at 10 o'clock. The funeral will take place at White Chapel, on Friday, March 7, at 10:30 a. m., and the interment will be made in Cedar Hill cemetery. Rev. Mr. Buell and Rev. C. W. Wallace will conduct the services.

The deceased was aged 81 years, 7 months and 10 days. He had lived on the same spot during his long and eventful life, on which he was born. He leaves three daughters and two sons, Mrs. John Ziegler of Columbus, Mrs. Oliver Dorsey of Newark township and Miss Louise Pitzer, who resides at home. The two sons, Charles B. and Richard Pitzer, reside in Licking township. Mr. Pitzer's wife died about three years ago. Mr. Anthony Pitzer, Auditor of Licking county, is a nephew of the deceased. Mr. Pitzer was a man of excellent abilities, a splendid character, honest and upright in every way, whose death will be sincerely mourned.

LOUIS PRIEST, AGED 90.

Mr. Louis Priest, an old and well known resident of Newark, died at the home of Mr. Charles Lederer, 152 N. Second street about 9 o'clock this morning of the ailments peculiar to advanced age, he being about 90 years old. There are a number of his relatives living, but where they are located is not known. The funeral arrangements have not been perfected as yet, and it is not known definitely when the funeral will take place.

ONLY A SUGGESTION

But It Has Proven of Interest and Value to Thousands.

Common sense would suggest that if one wishes to become fleshy and plump it can only result from the food we eat and digest, and that food should be albuminous or flesh forming.

Good, like eggs, beefsteak and cereals; in other words the kind of food that make flesh are the foods which form the greater part of our daily bills of fare.

But the trouble is that while we eat enough and generally too much, the stomach, from abuse and overwork, does not properly digest and assimilate it, which is the reason so many people remain thin and underweight; the digestive organs do not completely digest the flesh forming beefsteak and eggs and similar wholesome food.

There are thousands of such who are really confirmed dyspeptics, although they may have no particular pain or inconvenience from their stomachs.

If such persons would lay their prejudices aside and make a regular practice of taking, after each meal, one of two of Stuart's Dyspepsia tablets, the food would be quickly and thoroughly digested, because these tablets contain the natural peptones and disease which every weak stomach lacks, and by supplying this want the stomach is soon enabled to regain its natural tone and vigor.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets digest every form of flesh-forming food, meat, eggs, bread and potatoes, and this is the reason they so quickly build up, strengthen and invigorate thin, dyspeptic men, women and children.

Invalids and children, even the most delicate, use them with marked benefit as they contain no strong, irritating drugs, no cathartic nor any harmful ingredient.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets is the most successful and most widely known of any remedy for stomach troubles because it is the most reasonable and scientific of modern methods.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets are sold by every druggist in the United States and Canada as well as in Great Britain, at 50 cents for complete treatment.

Nothing further is required to cure any stomach trouble or to make thin, nervous, dyspeptic people strong plump and well. Feb. 26-28 Mar. 5-7

TIED HIS HANDS

BOUND HIS FEET AND SEWED HIM IN A BAG.

When the Sophs Took This Freshman and Laid Him on Floor in King Hall.

Granville, O., March 5.—Last Saturday night the Denison freshmen had a little feast in the Academy building.

All present being wrapped in sheets. To the amazement of the Freshies two Sophs were found among their number and they were quickly and effectively bounced from the hall. In retaliation for this treatment some of the Sophomore caught a Freshman, Fred M. Tidd, of Canton, O., by name and after tying his feet and hands, securely sewed him up neatly in a burlap bag, and carried him off to King hall, where many of the college girls live. After attaching a card which read "From the Soph boys to the Freshman girls."

The Soph boys to the Freshman girls' the Sophs pushed the young man through the front door of King hall about 8 o'clock and fled. The teachers and a few of the girls quickly released young Mr. Tidd who made his apology for the manner of his call and left the premises.

The Freshmen, learning of Tidd's treatment captured a couple of Sophs, and tied them up, but in all the scramble nobody has been hurt. There may, however, be a class rush before the day is over.

HUMORS OF TRAVEL.

The Independent American Citizen in a Sleeping Car.

(Special Correspondence.)

ON THE ROAD TO OMAHA, March 4.—We are in a sleeping car. All is cold outside. Holy saints, how cold it is! Inside our car all is warmth. A little old man with a round, pugnacious looking head covered with white hair, cropped close, so close that it stands up bristly and aggressive, like himself, calls to the porter.

"I say! Haven't you a little table to put up here before me. I've got to work all day."

The table is brought. The little old man spreads out before him a manuscript and cons it over and over. A physiognomist would say he is a health crank and is preparing his address for either the bean eaters' or the one meal a day folks' convention. In that car only one upper berth is occupied, and it is the one in which the little old man has the lower. Such is fate. The man of the upper berth comes in from the smoker. He tries to sit down in his place. The little old man's table crowds him out. He scowls and paces the aisle. No good. He complains to the conductor in a voice he means the little old man to overhear and paces on. The little old man overhears and says to the conductor in a voice he means his best partner to overhear:

"That man complains because I have this table here. I have to have it here all day. I've got to work all day."

The conductor can do nothing; nobody can do anything. The little old man cons on triumphantly half an hour. Then he raises his head and exclaims:

"Porter, open the ventilators all through the car. It's boiling hot in here. It's taken away all my appetite, and I've got to work all day."

The ventilators are opened, and the little old man draws a long breath of relief.

"Porter," roars a voice from the other end of the car, "shut those ventilators. The draft blows right down on the top of my head, and I can't stand it."

The voice comes from an ash colored man in a black necktie. The porter looks knowingly at the conductor, the conductor looks knowingly at the porter. The conductor smiles a sickly, worried smile, the porter smiles a merry smile.

"It's just the same every trip," says the conductor wearily. "One wants all Situation at Norfolk.

Norfolk, Va., March 5.—A mob of 500 strike sympathizers thronged the streets of Norfolk yesterday on which the main lines of the Norfolk Railway and Light company's cars are run and the police were unable to cope with it from noon until after dark, when the cars, which were guarded by detachments of military and had run with difficulty all day, were housed in the barns.

In the county where the barns are, the military was in control of the situation. Cars were repeatedly derailed, wagon loads of stones were piled on the tracks and free fights between the military guards and the crowd occurred during the day at frequent intervals.

Paine's Celery Compound

A Cured and Grateful Farmer's Wife Declares That Paine's Celery Compound Almost Raised Her from the Grave.

"A few words to weak, broken down, nervous and sick women at this time, and the pursuit of Mrs. Shepherd's letter, will, we trust, kindle hope and inspire fresh confidence in many a home where some loved mother, wife or daughter is hovering between life and death. At this season, thousands are nearing the grave; all can be saved by the prompt use of Paine's Celery Compound. Mrs. Virginia Shepherd, Powellton, W. Va., writes as follows:

"I had been sick for eight years, and no tongue can tell what I suffered. I would have spells of nervous headache when I would keep my bed five and six days, and could not raise my head off the pillow. Then I would get numb all over, and they would have to rub and work over me to keep me alive, and I would have sinking spells and palpitation of the heart, but thanks to Paine's Celery Compound, and I cannot praise it enough, I have not had a headache for six weeks, a thing I could not say before in eight years. Your Compound has almost raised me from the grave, as I had given up all hopes of this life until my husband read one of your pamphlets. After I had been using it I felt better than I had for three years."

STATE NEWS

HAPPENINGS IN ALL PARTS OF OHIO.

All Sorts of Buckeye News Items Boiled So that Only Real Facts Remain.

Bellevue—Michael Egan has filed a suit against the Nickel Plate railway for $20,000 for injury to a finger resulting in blood poison and physical disability.

Lima—The city council resolved to submit the question of issuing $150,000 bonds for additional waterworks storage reservoirs to a vote at the spring election.

Clyde—Neuralgia of the heart caused the sudden death of Dr. L. Harger, who lived here from Ft. Recovery, O., a year ago, and who was once assistant physician of the Cleveland Insane asylum.

Toledo—Stephen Wood, colored, 105 years old, died at his home here. Wood was born in slavery and lived a slave up to 1842 when he swam the Ohio river to Cincinnati and was spirited to Canada.

Canton—Edward Lumley, an employee of the Canton Machine Company, was found lying on the Ft. Wayne railroad track almost dead from suffering and exposure. Lumley had caught his foot in a frog and fell, breaking his leg. He was unable to extricate himself and lay in the yards all night.

Kent—Egg prizes at pedro parties are the latest in Kent and vicinity. At a party at James Wilkinson's Saturday evening, Willard McMackin won as a first prize two dozen Plymouth Rock eggs. Miss Gertie Zehning got the consolation prize, a half dozen bantam eggs. Several other parties are announced for this week, in which egg prizes are to be given.

Findlay—John Greethan and his 19 year old son were driving along a country road when an immense oak tree fell on them, pinning them to the ground in the debris of their buggy and seriously injuring them. To the fact that the tree fell first on their horse, breaking its back they owe their lives. Men were chopping down the tree and it got away from them.

Springfield—Joseph Mortimer, of Bainbridge was enticed into a caboose by the train men, handcuffed and brought to this city, where an officer awaited with a warrant charging theft. While a brakeman on the Detroit Southern Mortimer is charged with stealing a suit of clothes from Conductor Thomas Moore. He was wearing the clothes when arrested. Another train man charges him with a similar theft.

Cleveland—Henry A. Everett resigned as president of the Cleveland Electric railway company, known as the Big Consolidated. With his resignation was also handed in that of F. F. Wason, Secretary, and C. W. Wason, purchasing agent. The resignations of Mr. Everett and Mr. Wason from the Directory were also tendered. Mr. Everett said "The syndicate headed by Mr. Andrews will take the syndicate stock in the Big Consolidated next Saturday." The Big Consolidated controls and operates fully two thirds of the electric traction lines in this city.

Akron—While Mrs. Henry Williams ran to a grocery to telephone to the police to prevent the elopement of her 21 year old son Harry and Effie Ebley a young woman who boarded at her home, the couple escaped through a window and have not been found. Mrs. Williams had caught the pair packing their trunks and locking all the outer doors she ran for aid. She alleges that her son secured $50 from her yesterday.

Delphos—A mysterious man has been invading the Toledo, St. Louis & Western railroad yards here for the past week or more. He seldom makes his appearance in the day time, but every night he can be seen running through the yards with a red light. He is thought to be a man gone daft over railroad work as he will run at breakneck speed along the tracks in the dark, swinging a lantern and making a noise with his mouth similar to the exhaust of an engine. He is an entire stranger to all the men at the shops, and his place of hiding during the day has not yet been found.

Great Britain exports to its Colonies, according to recent returns, increased in 1901 by $1,365,000. Its exports to foreign countries in the same period, decreased $104,830,000.

Wooden Ships DIED HARD

[Copyright, 1902, by G. L. Kilmer.]

FIGHTING ON the water in 1862 was opened by so called ironclads, but not until the battle of the Monitor, March 9, was plate armor put to the proof. The naval authorities and congress grudgingly and with half heartedness toward the close of 1861 ordered the construction of plated vessels, but it is a fact that the ironclads Cincinnati, Carondelet, St. Louis, Pittsburgh and Louisville, which helped to win the victories at Fort Henry, Donelson and Island No. 10 in February and April, 1862, were built from the private funds of Captain J. B. Eads, the contractor, and were actually his personal property when they battled for the control of the Mississippi river and valley.

In their first battles the Eads gunboats fought against land batteries, and at Donelson the entire fleet was driven from the field by the superior power of the guns ashore. The first seven gunboats afloat had been constructed within two months. The armor was only two and a half inches thick, and at Donelson this was broken and shattered by the Confederate shells. In general appearance these gunboats resembled the famous Merrimac which the Confederates built from the hull of the old war frigate of that name. Like the Merrimac, the Eads ironclads had sloping sides and ends. They were flat bottomed and propelled by a central paddle wheel. They carried thirteen heavy guns, eight of them in broadside.

A GREAT WARSHIP FORTY YEARS AGO. [United States Frigate Congress, destroyed by incendiary shells March 8, 1862.]

The Eads gunboats were constructed for inland waters. The Monitor, which was launched at New York in March, was the first seagoing ironclad of the war. She finally proved unseaworthy. The Merrimac never put to open sea. So the main weapon for sea fighting on a grand scale which the Federal government had to depend upon in 1862 for opening up the James and Mississippi rivers was the old type of wooden ships and sloop. Several of the wooden ships were propelled by steam, but there were so many points of contact for the opposing navies that the United States, which retained control of nearly all of them, hadn't enough steamers to compose a decent fleet. A sailing ship, the ill fated Cumberland, was the first vessel to meet the ram Merrimac. The frigate Congress, a mammoth warship of the old line and the consort of the Cumberland when the Merrimac attacked the fleet, was also a sailer.

It was almost solely with the hope of sinking the Merrimac and thus preserving the wooden ships for the heavy purposes of naval warfare that the Federal government adopted Ericsson's plans and let him build the Monitor.

For that date the wooden ships had given a good account of themselves. They had fought land batteries at Roanoke and Port Royal in the fall of 1861 with better execution than the Eads ironclads in the west. Not one of them was put out of the fight by the enemy's shots, and after the Port Royal battle the Confederates abandoned all their exposed forts on the seacoast. Farragut went to the gulf to attack New Orleans with a fleet which consisted wholly of wooden ships, but even these were not all steamers nor all built for warfare. Not only that, but Confederates had on the lower Mississippi two ironclad ships, the Louisiana, constructed very much upon the plan of the Merrimac and the Eads gunboats—that is, with square upper works and sloping sides—and the ponderous ram Manassas.

The Louisiana was begun in the fall of 1861 and just completed when Farragut reached the gulf. She was plated around her gun chambers with railroad rails. The Manassas when on the water looked like the back of a whale but for her smokestack. Her rounded top and sides were heavily plated to ward the shot glancing off. She carried but one gun, being intended for ramming with either of her sharp ends.

A Fortieth Anniversary War Story

ARMORED GUNBOATS

February and March, 1862

She was worked by a powerful propeller, and the engine could eject steam and scalding water over her entire surface to repel boarders. This vessel was the most terrible of Farragut's antagonists when he attacked the New Orleans forts in April, 1862, and she, like the Eads gunboats, owed her existence solely to private enterprise. She had been built under the law for privateering, but after she had cleared the Federal ships out of the month of the Mississippi the Confederate government bought her to aid in the defense of the forts.

As a matter of fact, taking it all in all, the honors were even with the opposing ironclads, when it came to maneuvering and fighting. The Eads ships were light in the water, but their armor was of no more account against heavy missiles than a turtle's shell against buckshot. The Confederate ships could turn any shot in the Federal navy, but they were as clumsy as Noah's ark. The little Monitor could turn the enemy's shots and was so constructed that she dodged around the foe like a pygmy around a giant, but when forced to encounter heavy seas she went to the bottom.

Even when building the iron plated ships of war the projectors were slow to give up the notion that stout timbers were the main thing for the bulwarks of a fighting ship. The bow or fighting end of the Eads gunboat was made of solid oak twenty-four inches thick, covered with the thin iron plating. The thin iron shield sometimes proved a drawback. While a shell or a solid ball would often pierce the stoutest timbers that could be put into a ship's sides, it would only hit the objects directly in the line of its flight, but a shot obstructed by the plating would tear through the wood backing of the plate and hurl great splinters around the decks, disabling numbers of the fighting crew.

It was natural in the situation in the early stages of the war that the Confederates should pin their faith upon iron armor and the north cling to the wooden ships. The south was on the defensive and risked everything upon the salvation of its harbors and coasts. Even at Charleston in the Fort Sumter days the Confederates had iron batteries. The Merrimac and Louisiana were monster floating batteries, the Manassas a monster battering ram. The news of the building of these war vessels was received by northern sailors with smiles of contempt. They expected to outlast them and thus to outmaneuver and outfight them. This prejudice was not overcome all through the war, and there was experience to back it up.

Within a few years before the war the United States government had strengthened the navy by the addition of eighteen steam war sloops and frigates which had no superiors on the ocean. They were wooden, of course, but were moved by screw propellers so constructed that all the machinery was below the water line. All of them made splendid records during the war with the exception of the Merrimac, which was burned at Norfolk and raised and converted by the Confederates into the ram. Farragut had the Brooklyn and then the Hartford in his battles for the flag, and the Richmond was also in his fleet of fighters. Besides these three, the Niagara, Colorado, Wabash, Pensacola, Pawnee, Mobile, Iroquois, Wyoming and Seminole were crack ships of the best fleets during the hottest sea fights.

Swift sailing was a necessity for the northern navy at the outset, and her captains never lost sight of the fact, hence kept their faith in the wooden ship propelled by steam. It was well they did, because the labor and delay of creating ironclads made it impossible to have an armored fleet during the war. The first task was to establish a blockade along thousands of miles of seacoast and to have ships which could chase blockade runners and fight them on sight. The next problem was to maneuver and fight in front of fortifications. While guns and resisting power would be a good thing once a ship was within range of a fort yet the ability to get in or away quickly when necessary was just as much to be desired. The Eads ironclads barely saved themselves by backing rapidly out from the fire at Donelson.

Although the Federal wooden ships went down before the southern ironclads in every fair fight, the northern ship commanders never dodged the ordeal. Following the example set by the Merrimac early in 1862, the Confederate ram Arkansas in 1863 and the Albemarle in 1864 dashed into the wooden ships of the enemy and sent them to the bottom. But there were more wooden hulls left to keep up the fight, and scores of brave captains risked destruction rather than lower the flag before any craft afloat. Even when the missiles of the wooden ships rolled from the iron armor of the rams the gallant captains attempted to ride down their antagonists with their superior velocity. At Mobile bay, in 1864, Farragut tried to drive his wooden flagship upon the low decks of the ironclad Tennessee and carry her to the bottom. The wooden ships were doomed the moment iron armor became the fashion, but they died hard. The names Hartford, Brooklyn and Kearsarge, last of the line, stand only second to the oak ribbed warriors of 1812 the Constitution, Chesapeake and Lawrence.

LANCASTER

Women Who Disappeared Several Days Ago Cannot be Found—Hope is Abandoned.

Lancaster, O., March 5.—There is still no track of Mrs. Ezra McCleery, who disappeared from her home in this city so mysteriously several days ago. Her daughters with whom she lived have given up all hopes of ever seeing her alive again. It is feared that she wandered into the river or met with some fatal accident. She had about $100 with her when she left home, and there is suspicion of foul play.

A searching party was dragging the river and visited every place where the woman might be, but to no avail. The smaller towns surrounding have been notified to watch for the lady, and to report any trace that may be found.

Presbyterian Church Closed for Repairs—A Horse Sale—Window Broken—Personal Items.

Granville, O., March 5.—The Presbyterian church has been closed for repairs. The interior of the church is to be thoroughly repaired, the woodwork painted and the ceilings frescoed. Services are, for the present, being held in the Opera House. Services will be held each evening this week, conducted by the Rev. C. L. Work.

Mr. Fred DeFrance and sisters, Edna and Lillian, entertained the Centerville Club at their home on Friday evening, February 28. The members of the club were royally entertained and the evening was most pleasantly spent. It was an occasion that will long be remembered by all who enjoyed the hospitality of Mr. DeFrance and his sisters.

The horse sale by Messrs. E. J. Case, E. A. Smoots and John Geach at Case's livery stable today was well attended and some good sales were made. Some forty head of draft, general purpose and roadster horses had been advertised to be sold, of which a large portion were disposed of. Owing to the inclemency of the weather a number of would-be buyers were unable to attend the sale.

SEMI-WEEKLY

Printed in Klondike Brought $24 a Year, or 50 Cents a Copy—Publisher's Experience.

Washington C. H., O., March 5.—Zach F. Hickman of Seattle, Wash., is the guest of his wife's parents, Mr. and Mrs. D. M. Thurston of this city.

When the boom was at its height in the Klondike country he moved a newspaper plant from Seattle to Dawson and established a semi-weekly newspaper. The subscription price was $24 per year, and he got his subscription and had all the subscribers he wanted. Single copies of the paper sold at 50 cents each, and he often ran off extra editions of 1500 copies. The printing was done on a little hand-press and was rather slow work, but he always managed to get his paper out, and he was no more anxious to get it printed and distributed than the people were to get it, as there was a great craving for news in those days. He sold his plant and returned to Seattle with his pockets full of money. He is now engaged in the newspaper business in Seattle.

Elks To Celebrate.

The regular meeting of Newark Lodge, 391, B. P. O. E., was held on Tuesday night, with a good attendance of the members. Considerable business of importance was transacted, including the nomination of officers, the election to be held on the third Tuesday of this month. The members of the lodge also resolved to celebrate the fifth anniversary of the lodge with a banquet to be held on Wednesday evening, March 19. A general committee of five was appointed to take charge of the management of the State Convention to be held in this city during the first week of next September.

Married at Covington.

Henry V. Johns, aged 21, and Stella M. Sanford, age 21, both of Newark, Ohio, secured marriage license Monday and were married by Squire E. H. Baker—Covington Correspondent Cincinnati Enquirer.

Mr. Johns is a son of Mr. Henry Johns, the well known North Side barber, and is employed at the Everett glass works, and the bride is a daughter of Mr. George F. Sanford, night baggage master at the Baltimore & Ohio depot. The happy couple returned home on Monday night, and will make their future home in this city. They have the best wishes of all their friends.

A Name Twice Made Famous, Now a Shining Mark for Imitators.

The name "Chase," twice made famous, is a shining mark for the unscrupulous to pounce upon and appropriate in order to foist upon the public their worthless preparations. These birds of prey, by using the name Chase, expect the public to be fooled into believing they are the medicines of Dr. A. W. Chase, who first became noted as the author of the world famous Dr. Chase's Receipt Book and family physician, and whose fame is now doubly increased by the wonderful success of his Nerve Pills, with Nerve, Brain and Blood troubles. They play upon the name Chase, but dare not use the initials "A. W."

They imitate, but dare not counterfeit the portrait and signature of Dr. A. W. Chase, which identifies the Nerve Pills now recognized as infallible for building up pale, weak, thin-blooded, nerve exhausted sufferers.

Who are nerve-tired and brain-weary.
Who are easily exhausted.
Who are wakeful—cannot sleep.
Who have nervous headache.
They remove the cause of blood impurities, securing refreshing sleep and impart strength.

They build up people who find their strength and vigor waning.
They settle irritated nerves, replace languor and lassitude with energy and animation. Cure Nervous Dyspepsia.

CAUTION.—The protection to the public in securing the genuine, and original, Dr. A. W. Chase preparation, is in seeing the portrait and signature of A. W. Chase, M. D., on each box. These and these only are the genuine. Do not be satisfied with anything bearing the name "Chase" without the initials A. W. 50 cts. of Druggists or Dr. A. W. Chase Medicine Co., Buffalo, N. Y.

PRODUCE A RACE OF GIANTS.

An attempt to breed a race of human giants, one of the most remarkable scientific experiments undertaken in modern times, is to be begun at Rouen, the ancient capital of Normandy, says the London Express.

It seems that Count De Saint Ouen—a descendant of William the Conqueror—who endowed the undertaking to the extent of 400,000 pounds, confidently expected at the time of his death that the fortune which he bequeathed would ultimately be the means of regenerating the French people, but though scientists admit that it may be possible to breed a race of giants they regard the scheme on the whole as anything but a wise one.

The count's scheme is practically one of selective propagation. His money is left to encourage giants and giantesses to marry. One per cent will be given away each year. One couple selected every twelve months will receive the comfortable sum of 4000 pounds as a nest egg with which to begin housekeeping and to support the little giants and giantesses whom the stark may happen to drop down the chimney.

The Count De Saint Ouen was not the first to conceive such an idea. Frederick William, the first King of Prussia and father of Frederick the Great, attempted it nearly 200 years ago. He collected 2,400 giants, whom he enlisted in a regiment known as the "Potsdam Guards". Many giants were kidnapped for this regiment.

Frederick commanded his guardsmen to marry tall women, and it was his hope to propagate an army composed of giants. None of the men in the front rank of his Potsdam Guards was under seven feet in height. The scheme for cultivating giants, however, was abandoned before any important results were observed. Yet it is said that abnormally tall men in the vicinity of Potsdam today claim direct descent from Frederick's famous giant regiment.

It is of course, recognized, that great stature can be inherited. The best evidence that such a characteristic can be developed by propagation may be found in the wrestlers of Japan. They are much taller and very much heavier than the Japanese as a race, having for centuries been bred by selection.

TILLMAN-M'LAURIN

SHORT RANGE VIEW OF SOUTH CAROLINA'S FIERY SENATORS.

Former Editor of the Charleston (S. C.) World, Who Was Closely Connected With Early Political Careers of Both Men, Writes of Them.

(Special Correspondence.)

New York, March 3.—In order to thoroughly understand the conditions culminating in the senate chamber of the United States in an assault upon Senator McLauren of South Carolina by Senator Tillman of the same state it is necessary to go back to the 1900 campaign, which resulted in making

SENATOR BENJAMIN R. TILLMAN.

Tillman governor of South Carolina. In 1888 this same Tillman had attended the state convention at Columbia with a large following for the purpose of defeating the renomination of John Peter Richardson for governor. The Tillman contingent was little more than a disorganized mob. There was no leader save, Tillman, and that shrewd individual did not purpose to allow himself to be put up as a candidate merely to be bowled over. He cast about for a dummy and hit upon Joseph H. Earle, attorney general of the state. It was stated and at the time was generally believed that Tillman insisted that Earle permit the Tillmanites to name him for governor, the theory being that if Earle's consent could be obtained enough of Richardson's support could be weaned away to insure his defeat. This, it was realized, could not be done either with an out and out Tillmanite or with Earle if the latter withheld his consent. This he did, but Tillman went ahead and got his followers to vote for Earle anyway. Of course Richardson was renominated, and thereafter Earle was persona non grata at the court of Tillman.

During all the years of his agitation for the Clemson agricultural college Tillman's ultimate ambition was the governorship of South Carolina. He practically admitted this to me during our first interview. He had refrained from permitting himself to be put forward in the convention of 1888 because he knew he had no chance to win, and Tillman is not one of those heroes who are willing to sacrifice themselves "for the good of the cause." He likes glory, but he wants his in that practical, concrete form which carries with it the power of office, not overlooking the small salary.

In the spring of 1890—March 13, I think, was the exact date—the Tillmanites held at the statehouse in Columbia what was always studiously referred to by them as a "suggestive convention." The idea was that this body should select candidates for the state offices. These names were then to be "suggested" to the regular Democratic state convention.

This was the first tangible demonstration of Tillman's wonderful political sagacity. He knew that he would alienate thousands of voters if he should attempt to fight outside the regular party organization. Equally he knew that the "suggestion" of the farmers' convention would not have a feather's weight with the party convention. But he was convinced that the "suggested" convention's candidates would have the undivided support of all those who were tired of the "close corporation" methods of the old regime. He was right, and in the state convention in September every one of the "suggested" candidates was nominated, which is equivalent to saying "elected."

As a sidelight on Tillman's character it may not be amiss to relate something which happened at this farmers' convention. It looked decidedly squally for Tillman. A little fellow from Sumter county who had once before baited him on the stump was on hand and at one time appeared to be dangerously close to bringing the delegates to his view that it was injudicious to make suggestions in short, that it would be to all intents and purposes a slap at the regular party convention. Tillman jumped up. He waved the delegates to silence. With his perfect eye he seemed to transfuse in turn every one of the members. Then he began to speak. In common with all present I expected to hear a conciliatory, almost a pleading address. Instead he delivered an impassioned speech, which an audience of keener sensibilities would have considered insulting. He told his awed listeners that they did not know how to get what they wanted and wound up with the luminously egotistical declaration that he (Tillman) was the only man in South Carolina possessed of the courage who also had the brain to lead them to victory. The convention took him seriously.

I kept a careful tally as the counties were called, and when it became evident that even if all the remaining votes were for "suggesting" the affirmative would be lost by something like three the word was passed to John L. M. Irby, who circulated among his friends and soon obtained the requisite number of changes. When the legislature convened in the fall, Irby was elected speaker of the house, and upon the expiration of Wade Hampton's term was sent to the United States senate. Not bad for two minutes' work, either!

Tillman had not been inducted into office as governor before he began to cast longing eyes toward M. C. Butler's seat in the national senate. When the legislature was wrestling with the election of a successor to Senator Hampton, I asked Tillman why he did not take it himself. His reply was characteristic: "I have been telling these people all summer that I was the only man for governor. If I permit myself to be announced for the senate, the sincerity of my declaration will be questioned, because that would be equivalent to an admission that another man with answer as well as myself as governor. But," and he was silent for several seconds, "when Butler's term expires I may have something to say." What he later had to say and to what purpose he said it are known of all men.

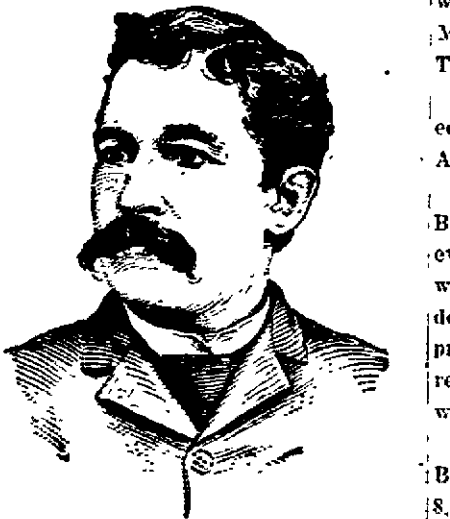

Tillman can no more be happy without notoriety than he can live without food. He likes to be talked about, and he seems to enjoy censure more than praise. In fact, while he frequently has been obliged to make use of the toadies who in swarms hang upon his coat-tails when he first came into prominence, he loathes them and in a personal way would much sooner do a favor to a political enemy. It does not flatter Tillman to tell him that he is a great man. He has so long been firmly convinced of that fact that any such statement merely seems to inspire in him pity for the person so obtuse as not to have discovered it years before. He enjoys a fight, and, inasmuch as most of his battles were fought with his tongue, the impression got abroad during the exciting campaign of 1890 that Tillman was physically a coward. I was, however, on the stand with him at Columbia during one of the most exciting political meetings ever held in South Carolina, and he then showed that physically he is a stranger to fear.

Tillman is a demagogue in a certain sense, but he is an honest one. He frequently makes ranting appeals to the passions of his followers, but he appears to do this purely on the theory that everything is fair in politics—except defeat. Nothing could be more erroneous than the impression that Tillman is an ignorant man. He is a close Shakespearean student and can write as incisively and grammatically as any man in the United States senate. That roughness of style for which he is celebrated—or shall we say notorious?—is an affectation. He knows better, but he does that, as he does all else, with a purpose.

Senator McLauren went into politics on the Tillman tidal wave of 1890, being elected to the legislature. He opposed the "separate car" bill and at the age of thirty was elected attorney general. Then he was sent to congress from the Marlboro district. He served several terms and on the death of Senator Earle was appointed to fill the vacancy. In the ensuing canvass he was elected over former Governor John Gary Evans.

McLauren is not a poseur like Tillman. He is much better liked by the business interests of the state, and he has the courage of his convictions. McLauren, although he is an eloquent orator, is a very poor writer, making mistakes of the most elementary sort and frequently using expressions which we expect only from a bright school-boy of a dozen years. He is in no way Tillman's mental or strategic equal and on an appeal to the people would stand no chance against his illogical and erratic but cyclonic colleague, Benjamin Ryan Tillman.

McLauren is thoroughly courageous, and if I were asked to name his weakest point I should say that it is a tendency to keep his ear too close to the ground in the effort to catch the drift of public sentiment at home, instead of going in to create opinion, as Tillman does. Tillman's weakest point is jealousy of the success of those who have risen through his initial efforts. McLauren is one of these, and while Tillman at first admired him greatly, I think that his dislike of the junior senator will be found to date from the day on which the latter demonstrated his ability to take care of himself politically. This was a menace to Tillman's dictatorship, and that Tillman is as absolute a dictator as a man can be in any section of the United States does not admit of question.

McLauren believes McLauren is right in his attitude on public questions; Tillman knows Tillman is right in his. That illustrates the salient difference in the characters of these two fiery members of the national senate.

MAGNIFICENT

Carriage on Which Mrs. Huntington Paid $31,000 in Duties.

(N. Y. Cor. Chicago Record-Herald.)

In the rich collection of gowns, furs, jewels, silver, paintings, and bric-a-brac purchased by Mrs. Collis P. Huntington for herself, her son and his wife, upon which $31,801.45 was paid as duty, there are a few remarkable objects. Most of the articles are for ordinary wear, though by no means ordinary in character. The values as fixed by the officials at here amounting to $760,000, but this is certainly less than the cost, as nothing in the list was of any commercial class, and each item had to be appraised in a general way. Persian lamb coats, heavy, long and made of the finest imaginable skins, were appraised at $20,000 each. There are two of them, and with the suit of magnificent Russian sable coat, muff and collar, they probably constitute the most costly set of furs in the United States. Four Paris gowns at $4,000 each make harmonious additions to the wardrobe.

Few of the articles except the furs have any unique characteristic, but a set of antique silver is of great richness and artistic beauty of design, and a pearl necklace is a collection of splendid gems.

Deputy Collector Williams said today that Mrs. Huntington had established a precedent that should be followed by all persons bringing dutiable goods into this country.

"If every one would do as Mrs. Huntington did," he said, "the custom officers would have little trouble. She had an itemized list already prepared for us, and she had on it every dutiable article in her possession."

FINE DAY, THIS

That is If You Don't Mind What You Say—Snow and Blow and Then Some.

The weather man handed out some pretty bad omen during the month of February which was exceedingly chilly from start to finish, the streets of Newark in all that month being covered with snow and ice, but March came in like a lamb and the snow and ice departed at the same time.

Just as most of us were about to see where we could get the largest loan on our overcoats the weather made another switch and cautioned everybody not to get rid of woollens and furnace fire too soon.

While it was cold Tuesday night, when all good people went to bed, nobody except the wise ones anticipated the condition that awaited Newarkites next morning. From midnight to dawn there was a heavy snowfall and between 6 and 8 a. m. the wind blew blizzard style, skinning three inch snow off the level and piling it up elsewhere. Street car tracks were covered nearly as fast as the men could sweep them. Everybody—practically everybody—was complaining and many threatened to move to a warmer climate before another winter. Here is a sentence that will tell the story accurately.

When market opened this morning there were just three wagonmen there, one selling pork, the other general market produce. The cold, windy, snowy weather had kept the farmers at home.

Cars on the Newark and Granville electric line ran a little late in the early morning hours owing to heavy snow drifts and the first car on the Columbus, Buckeye Lake & Newark road due at 8 a. m. got in an hour and a half late.

By 8 o'clock the wind had swept the south side of Main street between Third and Fourth, clean as one's floor and had neatly piled all the snow up on the north side of the street. Oh, it has been a delightful day.

Weather predictions for this month of March are not promising for the arctic and blue bird.

From Saturday the 1st to Tuesday the 6th general and heavy storms of rain, sleet, snow and wind were predicted, and they have come to pass. Now as to the future the prophet says: "Until about the 10, cloudy, threatening weather will prevail, but renewed storm conditions will be marked from about the 7th to the 10th inclusive. Changes are good for continued and general storms over the 10th and into the storm period extending from the 11th to the 16th. A reactionary storm period will center on and about the 19th and 20th, at which time change to warmer, falling barometer and wide areas of more rain and snow will pass eastward across the country. All of these storm perturbations until after the full moon will wind up with decided changes to colder, and blizzards squalls of sleet and snow in all northward part of the country.

The storm period central on the 24th covering 21st to 26th is the equinoctial. The days of greatest probable violence in this period will be the 23 to 26. Very decided northwesterly storms will rush southward and eastward at this time. The cold weather that is sure to follow will change to much warmer as the month goes out; the barometer will again fall and more reactionary rain and snow will visit many sections in their march eastward across the States.

MEMBER ILLINOIS ASSEMBLY

AFFLICTED WITH CATARRH OF THE THROAT AND LUNGS.

CURED BY PERUNA.

HON. JOHN J. FURLONG.

HON. JOHN J. FURLONG, Member of the Thirty-fifth General Assembly of the State of Illinois, writes of Peruna as follows: 1333 Osgood St., Chicago, Ill.

The Peruna Medicine Co., Columbus, O.

Gentlemen—“I can safely recommend Peruna as a remedy that will cure all catarrhal troubles. “It was of great benefit to me as it cured me of catarrh of the throat and lungs permanently and in a very short time. I am glad to add my endorsement to that of others.”—JOHN J. FURLONG.

Cures Made by Peruna are Permanent Cures.

A patient cured by Peruna is no more liable to catarrh than if he had never had it.

Cured of Catarrh of the Entire System.

Mr. William Flood, care Fifth Avenue Hotel, Louisville, Ky., says: “Your Peruna has completely cured me of that distressing disease, catarrh, which affected my head, nose, bronchial tubes, and, in fact, my whole system.

“For nine years I bought everything that was advertised as a cure for my complaint, but it so happened that I did not buy Peruna until nine months ago, according to your directions I am today a well man. I find Peruna to be the greatest family medicine ever discovered. I shall always keep a bottle of it on hand.

“I can candidly state that had it not been for Peruna I would have given up my position, being too weak to do my work. For eighteen years life was a burden.”—Mr. William Flood.

Congressman J. A. Barham, of Santa Rosa, California, writes: “At the solicitation of a friend I used your Peruna, and can cheerfully recommend it as an excellent remedy for all catarrhal troubles. It is indeed a wonderful medicine.”—J. A. Barham.

“If you do not derive prompt and satisfactory results from the use of Peruna, write at once to Dr. Hartman, giving a full statement of your case and he will be pleased to give you his valuable advice gratis.

Some Pretty and Comfortable House Gowns of New Materials.

(Special Correspondence.)
New York, March 3.—After all, the dresses worn by women at their own homes during the days of their importance than the few festive and ornate ones put on to show to the multitude under the glare of the gaslight. A true lady takes as good care of her appearance at home even on a rainy afternoon as when she is on dress parade. Her garments may be plain and simple, but they may also be beautiful and tasteful. Too many women when caught unawares at home may be found in an old and faded kimono or a most unduly wrapper. We cannot be dressed up at all times, but we can be clean and have whole garments.

There are so many of the soft and useful woolen goods available that it is like mentioning them. Among them we find many a really pretty clean plaid in Scotch tarts in the more subdued colors. These are excellent for wear and will stand several visits to the laundry. They never change in color. Therefore they are especially valuable for house gowns and for children's clothes. Plaid makes a desirable house dress in that it wears so well, keeps clean so long and requires so little fussing. Given the proper colors, a plaid dress is stylish.

One of the Scotch tarts is represented in the illustration. The colors are dark brown and fawn with a center stripe of dark red and here and there a thread of yellow. The third is more suspected than seen. The skirt is cut with a seam down the front which brings the design on the bias. There is a shaped flounce with three bands of wide heretics, bound with corded edges. The bodice is black.

The waist is a pretty loose with a crush belt made of brown silk. A small place is left into the neck of the waist, made of the silk. The sleeves are the latest and best liked of the variations on the bishop. The sleeve is cut all one width from top to bottom, but the top is made to conform to the shape of the arm by means of tucks, which break off a trifle below the elbow and form a puff. The cuff is made with roundabout tucks in this instance, but each pair of sleeves differs from the others according to personal taste. But the main idea is to have the bishop with the fullness brought to the forearm. The whole design is one which can be made up in almost any kind of woolen material or in the cotton goods for later in the season. It is just such a model as will appeal to any sensible woman.

Among the best goods for making pretty and serviceable house dresses are all wool cashmeres, fine chevots, silk, warp henriettes, solids, satin duch, prunellas, etamines, melrose, satin panne cloths, tailor cloths and poplins, but poplins are never very good to wear. Challie and the pretty printed flannels and some of the plain flannels are also worth making. Camels hair may be said to be in the second class now.

The new cotton chevots are the prettiest of anything in that line ever offered, and more suits will be seen this coming summer than can be counted. They are made firm and with a solid body. At the same time they are flexible and easy to make. They are fadeless and will not shrink.

Words cannot tell how very dainty and pretty the linens are. Some of them are a mass of fine embroidery and so fine and transparent that the lining would show through the mesh. Natural colors are best liked, though quite a number have been at least partially bleached.

The new hats are being made as fast as the nimble fingers of the milliners can fly for the openings. The prevailing trimming seems to be lace and flowers and foliage. When the trimming is to be foliage, nothing else is added, but many of the roses have leaves and buds, especially in trailing lines. Crush roses without leaves are much liked and are placed between rills and drapings of lilies or some other lace, but the most of the lace used on the hats is of the beaded kind. The general trend seems to be of lace and grace. Some hats are trimmed with holly leaves and others with fruits, such as cherries, nutmegs and grapes. It is rather strange to see fruits on spring hats, but such is woman.

GOLDEN WEDDING

CELEBRATED TUESDAY BY MR. AND MRS. JAS. TAYLOR.

At Their Home in Union Township.— Presents Given to the Couple—A Happy Occasion.

The golden wedding anniversary of Mr. and Mrs. James Taylor, two of Union county's most highly respected citizens, was appropriately celebrated at their old home place in Union township on Tuesday March 4. Mr. Taylor or as he is better known, Square Taylor is a son of the late Am. Taylor, one of Union county's honored pioneer citizens. He and his brother Thomas Taylor of Union Station were the only children Mr. James Taylor, who is bright and active at the age of 72 years, was married on the 4th of March, 1832, to Miss Lucinda Winters, who is some years his junior at her home in Union township. Mrs. James Taylor is a daughter of the late Christopher Winters, Esq. and was one of fourteen children, eight of whom are living. The living children of Mr. and Mrs. James Taylor are Messrs John, George, Dudley A., Oscar K. Taylor and Mrs. Frank Moore and Mrs. Stephen Ackerman, two other children having passed over into the spirit land.

The golden wedding celebration on Tuesday was in the nature of a surprise on Mr. and Mrs. Taylor, and it was a complete one, especially on the latter. Mr. Oscar Taylor drove over after his mother early in the forenoon who now resides on the main Hebron road, about five miles west of Newark, on the pretense of taking her over to his present home, which is the old home place of the venerable couple, to spend the day with their daughter, Mrs. Frank Moore of Granville. As they drove into the door yard Mrs. Taylor was completely surprised and so was Mr. Taylor, to be greeted by their children and grandchildren, and a few neighbors, to the number of some 35 or 40, who had met to surprise them on their golden wedding day.

After a brief happy season spent in affectionate greetings and congratulations, all present sat down to a sumptuous dinner that had been quickly prepared from the well laden baskets of the company. The bride and groom of fifty years presided with graceful dignity at the table, and of the guests present Mr. Thomas Taylor of Union Station, a brother of the groom, and Mr. John Taylor of Newark, a cousin, were the only guests who were present at the original wedding fifty years ago.

After full justice had been done to the dinner, Mr. C. C. Winters of Outville, a brother of Mrs. James Taylor, with a few well chosen words, presented a handsome gold-headed cane to Mr. Taylor as a gift from his sons, and a beautiful gold ring to Mrs. Taylor as a gift from his daughter. The venerable couple were also the recipients of numerous handsome presents from the other relatives and friends. The entire occasion was a most delightful one, and one that will linger long in pleasant memory. That Mr. and Mrs. Taylor may live to celebrate many more such happy anniversaries in health and happiness, surrounded by their loved ones, is the heartfelt wish of their many friends.

THE SICK

Mrs. Martha Harter of South German street, who has been quite sick for the past four weeks with rheumatism, is reported as being considerably better at this writing.

Mrs. George Benner has been quite sick at her home on Second street for some days.

Misses Besie Seward and Katharine Ketter of Edmiston's Book Store, are off duty on account of sickness.

Drumm-Neibarger.

Mr. Webster Drumm, a young farmer residing in the eastern part of the county and Miss Mary Neibarger, who has been making her home with Mr. John C. Shaw, east of the city, were married Wednesday. The ceremony took place at the residence of Mr. Shaw, and was performed by the Rev. Lester Boyce in the presence of a few friends. The happy couple will immediately go to housekeeping in their new home near Brownsville.

BUCKEYE LAKE

Company Notified It Must Complete a Portion of the Road Not Yet Touched.

(Columbus Press.)

When the franchise for the Buckeye Lake road was granted it originally provided that the end of the road should be at the corner of Mound and High streets. There was also a provision made that an extension or branch should be run down Third street in order to connect with the interurban loop. Prosecutor Taylor on Monday addressed a letter to the managers of the Buckeye Lake road calling their attention to the fact that nothing is being done along the square from Third to High streets, and warning them that steps will be taken at once to have the franchise on that portion of Mound street declared null and void. The understanding on which the right of way was secured from the property owners was that the real terminus of the road should be at the corner of Mound and High streets. As a matter of fact the road still has plenty of time in which to complete its tracks to the point mentioned.

Coffee Circular.

State Dairy and Food Commissioner Blackburn is sending out a coffee circular to the wholesale and retail dealers in coffee in Newark and elsewhere throughout the state enclosing the opinion of Judge Thompson in the Arbuckle case. The Commissioner says: you will observe that every point raised in the action referred to was decided favorably to this department and adversely to the plaintiffs. The Department will take the case to the Supreme court for final decision. You are therefore notified that it is the intention of this Department to prosecute dealers for the sale of "Ariosa", and other glazed coffees identical in character with samples heretofore examined by the State's chemists and you are respectfully requested to govern yourselves accordingly. Information of violations of this ruling is urgently requested.

DAINTY TRIFLES.

Art Nouveau Jewelry and Flower Neck Ruffles.

The art nouveau jewelry is charming and very low of price considering how artistic its designs are. It is particularly adapted to batpins, tuff and chain bags and to those numerous little pendants and ornaments which decorate up to date gowns. The enamel this year are particularly beautiful and form worthy settings for jewels in the old French and Italian styles. Jewels of all the different colors are now being blended together in the most successful manner.

One of the latest neck ruffles consists of seven bunches of violets and their green leaves. Between each bunch there are tiny frillings, and there are two long accordion plaited cascades of pale lavender liberty silk.

The Louis XV. style is worn very much with decolette gowns, and a modification of this consists in having a waist made of flowered silk with a long sash fastened to it, the sash being also made of the flowered silk. This is worn with a ruffled lace or tulle skirt.

The cut shows a bolero made of black chantilly and narrow black velvet ribbon. To make this buy chantilly or black lace of a pronounced design and pick out the design here and there with silver spangles. The collar is made with a bit of the black lace bordered with a strip of silver spangled goods, which in turn is appliqued with strappings of narrow black velvet ribbon. All around the lower edge of the bolero there is also a fringe of these narrow ribbons, each ending in a tiny rhinestone ornament.

face, but should also allow the softening effect of the hair to come over the forehead.

The craze for white is also noticeable in hats. White beaver or a mixture of straw and beaver ranks first, while soft straws mingled with chamille are also making their appearance. Denim hats of tulle and silk are now being offered for sale in a variety of attractive shapes. A black hat of this spring and fall description is always a useful addition to a woman's wardrobe.

Hats of ecru lace and insecton trimmed with pale blue and pink promise to be among the season's novelties.

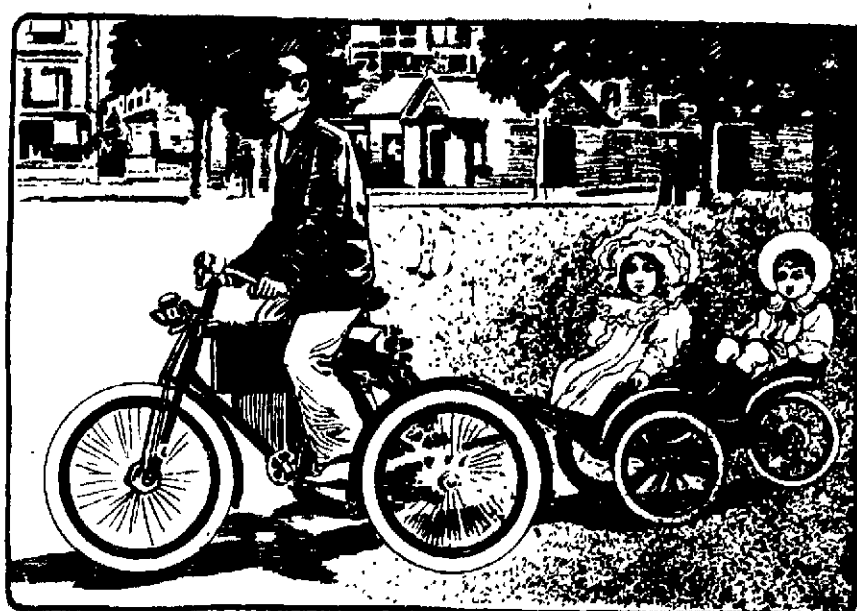

This smart tulle hat may be carried out by any clever woman. Both brim and crown are laid in tiny ripples. The brim is bent in little ripples. The crown is encircled with a narrow velvet ribbon passed through a long buckle and knotted so as to fall over the hair in the back. Over and under the brim on the left side it is trimmed with large pink roses without foliage.

And the fat, snowy mass is just right for the making of all sorts of good things.

DRUMMERS IN THE BEURS.

How the Boys of Amsterdam Obtained a Remarkable Privilege.

The boys of Amsterdam are happy in the possession of a very curious privilege which has been theirs for nearly 300 years. During one week at midsummer they gather every afternoon by hundreds and even thousands in the Dam, the great square in the center of the city, each boy with a drum slung over his shoulder.

So soon as the business of the day is over in the Beurs, or Stock Exchange, which faces the square, as many of the boys as can crowd into the building are allowed to go upon the floor of the exchange, where for an hour or two they march about, singing and beating upon their drums.

The din is appalling, but the good citizens of Amsterdam endure the racket with characteristic placidity.

As for the origin of this singular custom, it is said to date from the discovery and discovery of a Spanish plot against the city in the year 1622. At that time, after half a century of warfare, the Dutch republic had forced Spain to concede its independence, and Amsterdam had become the chief commercial city of the world.

But the Spaniards were very bitter over the loss of their rich provinces in the Netherlands, and in 1622 hostilities between the two countries again broke out.

One afternoon a party of boys playing in the Dam lost their ball in the canal, which in those days skirted one side of the square and ran directly under the Beurs. One of the boys clambered in among the piles on which the building stood and found, instead of his ball, a boat moored in a dark corner and loaded to the gunwale with boxes and barrels filled with gunpowder.

It was evidently the purpose of the Spanish conspirators to blow up the Beurs while it was crowded, as it was every day, with the leading citizens of Amsterdam.

The frightened boy at once hurried to the burgesses of the town with his story, the boatload of explosives was quickly sunk in the canal, and the danger was over.

When the young hero of the occasion was asked what reward he would have for the service he had rendered the city, he begged that, so long as there was a Beurs in Amsterdam, the boys might be allowed to make its floor their playground during part of the year in memory of the day when at their games they were the means of saving the building from destruction. The request was granted, and the custom has been carefully observed to this day.

They are just finishing a fine new Beurs in Amsterdam, and some of the members of the exchange have advised that the boys and their drums be kept out of it altogether. But the mere suggestion has stirred up such a commotion among the worthy burgesses of the city that there appears to be no danger of the repeal of the privilege.

It is fortunate that this is so, for there would be many besides the boys of Amsterdam to lament the disappearance of so quaint and interesting a survival of the past.—Youth's Companion.

Little Lou.

"Don't wash my face!" begged little Lou.

"It hurts where pussy scratched it—oo."

"Don't wash my hands; they're chapped, you know."

I cut that finger, too—oh, oh!

"Don't touch my hair!" sobbed little Lou. "I tumbled my hair into the wash-bowl."

"Oh, please don't touch that hair!" sobbed little Lou. "I tumbled my hair into the wash-bowl."

But a new comb came to her. "Please don't touch my hair!" sobbed little Lou. "I tumbled my hair into the wash-bowl."

TRANSPPOSED CITIES.

An Amusing and Instructive Game to Play at Recess.

Here is a game which will help you wonderfully with your geography lessons and which, besides being hard enough to make you sharpen your wits to their keenest edge, is just heaps of fun. It will help you to remember the names and location of cities in a really remarkable way, and when you win the game you can pride yourself upon being pretty near the head of your class in geography.

The game may be played by either boys or girls or both, but there should not be more than six players, or the game will be too long for your recess time. Each player must write on the blackboard some one or two words that when the letters are changed around will spell the name of some city. After this word or words must be written the name of the state in which that city is situated. For instance, some one might write Troy, New York. Of course that would be Troy, New York, when the letters are properly arranged. Some one else might write Boston, Massachusetts. When the letters of these words are transposed, they would read Boston, Massachusetts.

When all the players have written on the board, then each one tries to solve the meaning of what the others have written. Each must write his answers down on a piece of paper without telling any one else what they are, and when all have finished then each one writes on the board the correct answers to his or her words after the words be or she has written before.

Now comes the scoring. You score two points for every one of the words that you solve correctly, but you are minus one point for every one that you make a mistake on—that is, every time you guess wrong one point is taken away from your score. If any one should give the wrong state after the word that, when changed, is the name of his city, that one is minus two points. Then all points are reckoned, and the one with the largest score wins that game. You will have time for two or three games before recess is over.

The Echo.

"Hop! hop! hop!" shouted little Henry as he was playing in a field near the wood.

"Hop! hop! hop!" came an echo in reply.

"Who's there?" asked Henry, for he had never heard an echo before.

"Who's there?" replied the echo.

"Foolish fellow!" cried Henry at the top of his voice.

"Foolish fellow!" was the reply from the wood. At this Henry got very angry and called out many ugly names.

The voice from the wood repeated every word. Henry could not tell who it was speaking from the wood, so he ran home and told his father that a boy hidden in the wood had called him bad names.

"Ah, Henry, you have heard nothing but the echo of your own words. The bad names came first from your own lips. Had you used kind and gentle words you would have had kind and gentle words in return."

"Remember that kind words bring back kind echoes."—A. L. K., Primary Education.

Filipino Boys Are Catching Rats. Military officials at Manila have advised the war department of their warfare upon the rats of that town. The authorities, on the recommendation of surgeons, have set aside $2,500, and that sum will be utilized in an effort to exterminate the vermin. There was much discussion of the manner in which the money could be used most profitably, and it was decided that it would be most effective to expend it in the form of a bounty offered to whoever was able to kill a rat. The young Filipino boys have hailed the prize fund with every manifestation of joy, and already there is a steady drain being made upon the allotment by the youth of the town, who are bringing in their evidences of spoil. It is estimated that fully 20,000 rats will be captured in this way.

Cow With a Bark.

Henry was sitting on the fence in front of the house one day watching some cows feeding when they belched out long, low, moaning sounds. Henry had never heard a cow belch before, and he jumped down and ran into the house to his mother, crying:

"Oh, mother! there's a cow out there belching!"

"Oh! All the mothers are at home with their babies."

THE DUTY ON WOOD PULP.

A Reasonable Demand for Its Abolition by American Newspaper Publishers.

(New York Evening Post.)

The American Newspaper Publishers' Association, at its annual meeting yesterday, passed the subjoined resolution:

"Resolved, That the American Newspaper Publishers' Association ask Congress to abolish the duty on wood pulp, mechanical ground wood, and lumber used in the manufacture of paper, and that the duty on news print paper be reduced."

This resolution expresses, we think the unanimous wish of the press of the United States, and is, in itself, a reasonable proposition. The material for the manufacture of wood pulp (spruce logs) is becoming scarce, so that, under the normal relations of supply and demand, the price of paper must rise. The very scarcity of the material favors a combination of the paper manufacturers. As soon as the latter can control the supply, they can advance the price, and may be forced to do so even against their will. The publishers, as a general rule, cannot advance the price of their newspapers without incurring great risks. A one-cent newspaper for example, cannot raise its price to 2 cents without danger of losing the bulk of its circulation, yet a small advance in the price of white paper may make it impossible to sell at 1 cent per copy without loss. The entire press of the country is facing the problem of an advance in the price of its raw material, which will come soon unless the supply of wood pulp can be increased.

No such increase of supply is possible except from foreign countries. Canada and Norway have large forests of the kind of timber suitable for wood pulp, and are able to produce pulp itself cheaper than it can be made here. Under the Dingley tariff, logs and blocks of wood for the manufacture of pulp are admitted free, but wood pulp, if bleached, is subjected to a duty of one-quarter cent per pound, dry weight. The rate for unbleached pulp produced by the mechanical process in one-twelfth cent, and by chemical process one-sixth cent per pound. The duty on print paper is three-tenths cent per pound. There is a senseless provision in the law that, if any country shall impose an export duty on pulp wood, an equivalent amount shall be levied as an additional duty on wood pulp imported from such country. This provision, foolish in any case, is especially so in the case of a country which has an insufficient supply of the article in question. The export duty puts an obstacle in the way of the importing country which is seeking an additional supply. The countervailing duty doubles the obstacle, without any gain to anybody. However that may be, the duties on paper-making materials, and on paper itself, ought to be repealed, but they will not be repealed or reduced unless the newspapers make it a personal matter with their respective Congressmen. The tariff combine will resist the change, not because the duty on wood pulp is of any particular consequence, but lest the opening of any crevice in the wall shall lead to wider breach, for the same reason that Mr. McKinley's reciprocity treaties were throttled, the movement for free wood pulp will be resisted and defeated, unless the newspapers solemnly tell their Congressmen that they will oppose the nomination and re-election of every one who votes against the measure. The Illinois Press Association seems to have reached this determination. Nothing short of this will be of any effect.

TINY TOTS

Journey 6,000 Miles to Notify Father of Mother's Murder.

(St. Louis Post-Dispatch.)

Two children direct from Portugal passed through Union Station Friday morning bearing tidings of their mother's murder to the father in far-away Hawaii. They are traveling a distance of 6,000 miles.

The little ones reached St. Louis at 6 o'clock. They were delivered to Matron Hunter by the trainmen. On the boy's coat was a tag bearing this information:

"Antonio de Neselemento and sister, Marie Zulmida Evangelina. Billed to G. S. Bell, 65 Jackson street, San Francisco."

The other side of the card bore the advertisement of a steamship company.

The boy is apparently 9 nine years old and the girl 4. Neither can speak nor understand a word of English.

Pinned to their ticket is an order from the Eastern representative of J. D. Spreckles & Bro. for transportation from San Francisco to Honolulu. A note says the father, Antonio, works on a Spreckles sugar plantation, and that he does not know of the coming of the children.

An interpreter was found to read the letter the boy carried. It stated that Anita had met death at the hands of Guido, and that masses had been paid for the repose of her soul. The children are sent to the father because the writer believes when he hears the news he will never return to Portugal. The paper is signed M.

Antonio and Marie were put on the morning train for Kansas City.

We have just received several tons of wall paper which will be sold at sacrifice prices. Donaldson Bros., 35 South Second street.

Two policemen with broad hands and plenty of strength back of them, acted as masters of ceremonies at a public spanking administered to six youthful delinquents in Kearney, N. J., police court. The boys whose ages ranged from 10 to 12 years, were taken before Recorder Krebs yesterday on charges of opening freight cars and destroying property. Krebs sentenced each to a "good hard spanking" as the alternative of a $5 fine. The parents spoke for the boys and chose the spanking. Chief of Police Tolen selected two able bodied policemen. Each took a boy and placed him across his knee in the approved position and an instant later the court room rang with bells.

BIG GAS WELL

Said to be One of the Best in the Homer Field Drilled in on the Miller Farm.

The Treat & Crawford Co., owners of the Mt. Vernon Natural Gas Co., on Monday, drilled in a natural gas gusher on the Miller farm, located seven miles southwest of Mt. Vernon. The well is one of the best in the Homer field, and its estimated daily output is two and a half million cubic feet daily. The gas was struck at a depth of 2250 feet. The output will be piped to Marion in case the council of that city grants a franchise to the Treat & Crawford people.

SUMMIT STATION.

Prince Henry at Home

(Philadelphia Record.)

"I can't help contrasting all this fuss we are making over Prince Henry of Prussia with the attitude of the Germans toward him at home," said a man who has traveled abroad extensively. "I was in Berlin when the Crown Prince came of age. A Crown Prince, you know, has three years the advantage over an ordinary mortal. He comes of age at 18. It was a great gala occasion, but Prince Henry did not cut much of a figure. Nobody seemed to pay the slightest attention to him. I have seen him often in the streets of Berlin, and he arouses no more enthusiasm than you or I would, nor does he attract any more attention. We are making so much fuss over him that the first thing we know he will be making his home here." I suppose he feels that a Prince, as well as a prophet, is not without honor, save in his own country."
